Hixburg

Hixburg, July 21.- Filled and overflowing onto the hall steps was the living room of Mrs. Lizzie Ford and Mrs. H. M. Marshall when the Pamplin Home Demonstration Club met in their home on Thursday. Names of four new members, Misses Minnie and Mamie Cole, Mrs. J. W. D. Canada and Mrs. Luther Nash, were added to the roll.

Mrs. Leslie Ligon, whose hobby is raising and arranging flowers, gave clear directions for flower arrangements for churches.

If you happen to be driving through Pamplin, and should see in a yard two beautiful weeping willows and a profusion of flowers in bloom, anytime from early spring to late autumn, you will be passing the home of Mrs. Leslie Ligon, otherwise known as "Miss. Annie."

On Friday morning, with a twinge of sadness, the Johnny and William Hixes gave farewell to Mr. Amirud-Din. This student from Pakistan had been in their midst for ten days and his keen mind, and quaint speech, had endeared him to all who knew him.

He was asked to give his impressions of Virginia.

"No. 1," he said, "especially pleased with the hospitality of the people."

"No. 2, greatly impressed by the activities of the 4-H Clubs, etc."

(He organizes these in Pakistan).

"No. 3, mechanized farming interests me."

(There is not so much machinery used in his country, and what they have comes from U. S. A. and Great Britain).

"No. 4, I noticed that the people are always busy and are hard workers."

Learning to be homewomen at a tender age were Janet and Jane Hix last Thursday, when they rode the ponies at the Concord Riding Ranch.

After the riding fun, there was a picnic dinner honoring their cousins, Joanna, Lynn, and Jack Oliver, of Kensington, Maryland, who are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. R. H. Oliver at Prospect.

CREWE, VIRGINIA

Abbitt For Rights Law

Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D-Va) said today he is hopeful that the Senate will soon act on the House-passed bill aimed at preventing invalidation of certain state laws by the Supreme Court.

The House passed the bill, H. R. 3, last Thursday by a vote of 240 to 154 and it is now awaiting action in the Senate.

During the lengthy House debate on the measure, sponsored by Representative Howard W. Smith, of Virginia, Abbitt strongly endorsed the proposal. In a speech on the House floor Abbitt said he considered the measure "one of the most constructive and important bills to come before the House this year." He said the bill is designed "to restore some of the dignity of our states which has been lost in recent years as a result of continuous invasion of their rights by the federal government."

The 4th District Congressman said the bill has received endorsement throughout the country from "citizens who have become particularly aroused over the trend toward socialism in America. People in all parts realize that unless this trend is slowed down and stopped, our form of democracy is in great danger."

Abbitt said the "octopus-like, yearning for power" has proceeded along two main lines. One, he said is the increasing authority of the federal government in many areas of social and economic life while the other is "the usurpation of powers formerly held by the states." He strongly assailed the recent trend toward the arrogation of power by the judiciary" and said the "spirit and letter of the 10th amendment have been grossly violated."

The Virginian told the House that unless something is done to further insure the rights of the states, "all state power will ultimately succumb to federalism. I am firmly convinced that unless this bill is passed and some corrective action taken, we will continue to go down the road of Federal usurpation until we reach that point where the states will become no more than territories; where no law will be Federal law; and where the country will be governed according to one single standard."

Abbitt warned that "we can not idly by and see the rights of our states slowly grasped away—at that point when they will be no more. Then it may be too late. We will then only be able to raise our voices in regret — just as many other free peoples have done throughout history.

"It is an easy escape to say that it could not happen in America, but is it a safe assumption? Within my lifetime I have seen many things come to pass which I never dreamed would happen. Only in recent years have I come to realize the fact that nothing can be taken for granted. We have seen powers render decisions which a few years ago seemed impossible until they came. And they have touched the end of the line by any means. What states rights, and personal freedoms we have left in America can no more be taken for granted than those we have heretofore lost."

Heart Artery Used Successfully In Repair of Throat

LOS ANGELES — A promising new repair process for cancer-ravaged throats in which the large artery of the heart is used to restore the esophagus has been reported from the University of California Medical School, Los Angeles.

Dr. Joel Pressman, UCLA professor of surgery, described the new technique last week before the Southern Section of the American College of Surgeons in Palm Springs. The research has been supported by the U. S. Public Health Service.

The technique was developed during several years of animal experimentation, the UCLA surgeon said. It has been performed successfully in two human cases.

The large artery, known as the aorta, is the main exit of blood from the heart. It is obtained from a human artery bank where it is stored in a dehydrated state in a sealed tube.

The aorta may be used as an intact tube to replace the entire section of the esophagus situated in the neck. Or a portion of it may be used to "patch" the cervical esophagus, depending on how much of the organ has been removed in cancer surgery.

Actually the aorta serves as a "form" around which the body's natural repair processes rebuild a new esophagus. The artery may remain in place for many months but is eventually absorbed and replaced by new tissue.

The elastic tissue of the large artery seems ideally suited to the body's repair processes, Dr. Pressman said.

'57 Savings Rate Topped Debt Rise

NEW YORK — For the second time in the current decade, the American people last year added more to their "nest egg" in life insurance and other accumulated long-term savings than they expanded their debt indicating a growing restraint on the part of the typical consumer in response to the growing impact of inflation on the family budget and the adjustment trend in the economy.

It is true that the people at large went deeper into debt to the tune of more than a billion dollars a month as an average for 1957 in their borrowing to buy homes, cars, and other goods and services. The combined total of mortgages on one-to-four family nonfarm homes, consumer credit, farm mortgage and non-real estate debt, and life insurance policy loans increased by an estimated $12¾ billions for the year.

As against this, however, the total of accumulated long-term savings of individuals in life insurance, savings accounts, savings and loan associations, and current redemption value of U.S. Savings Bonds owned by individuals, rose by an estimated $13½ billions during 1957.

Roaches Held Potential Carriers of Diseases

WASHINGTON — Cockroaches are highly dangerous potential carriers of human disease. This is stressed in a report of the Quartermaster Research and Engineering Center, recently issued by the Smithsonian Institution.

At least 18 species of cockroaches known to inhabit houses have been incriminated, naturally or experimentally, in transmission of infectious agents, or have been claimed to bite man. Several of the commonest species have been captured repeatedly in sewers, cesspools, and septic tanks and have been found migrating from sewers and dumps into nearby buildings. The predilection of cockroaches for human food is notorious. Thus, the scientists point out, the mechanism certainly exists for transference of disease organisms to man and domestic animals.

Mathematics Returning To Former Eminence

LOS ANGELES—Mathematics is finally returning to the position of eminence it held more than 4000 years ago, according to a professor emeritus of Latin and Greek.

Dr. Arthur Patch McKinlay of the University of California, Los Angeles, said statements by college deans throughout the country that the demand for college mathematics by students is at its highest peak evoke only a calm "I told you so" from the linguists.

"The linguists know that when our words were being worked out some 4000 or more years ago, the word mathematics meant 'learning.'" Dr. McKinlay said.

Broken down, the Greek word mathematics is composed of "matha" (learning), "mat" (what results in), and "tics" (pertaining to).
